

An Account of the flight, discovery and apprehending George, Lord Geffries, Baron of Wemm, Lord Chancellor of England together with the manner of his being taken, examination, and commitment to the Tower on the 12th of December, 1688.

1688

An Account of the Flight, Discovery and Apprehending George Lord Geffries, Baron of Wemm, Lord Chancellor of England: Together With the Manner of his being Taken, Examination, and Commitment To the TOWER; On the 12th. of December 1688.

UPon the News of the Prince of Orange's Approach, and the general Retreat and going over of the King's Forces, an extraordinary Council was held at Whitehall on Monday last, where, it is said, the Lord Chancellor was present: But perceiving his Cause desperate, and the King's Interest not capable of supporting him, he, from the breaking up of that Council, retired himself from Business, and from any Conversation, studying, as 'tis supposed, how and by what means to shift for his Safety, and avoid the Storm (that he no doubt foreaw) hanging over his Head, and on Tuesday morning he was no where to be found: So that it was conjectured he, upon Notice of the King's Retiring, was endeavouring to make his Escape beyond the Seas. And so indeed it fell out: For having made over some of his Goods, and otherwise disposed of what he could with conveniency in so short a time, he betook himself to find a Passage by Water, and in order thereto went down to Wapping, there waiting for the Opportunity in a Dugie, contrary to his former florid Equipage. However he carry'd it not so secretly, but those who pryed into such Affairs, understanding a great quantity of Treasure, and other things of Value were towed in a Veil lying near the River side, it gave suspicion that something more than ordinary was intended. Inasmuch that supposing it a Freight no ways convenient for such a Veil, it being said to be a Collier, spoke so loud, that it came in Question. And thereupon they apply'd themselves to the Officers proper for that

An Account of the Flight, Discovery and Apprehending George Lord Geffries, Baron of Wemm, Lord Chancellor of England: Together With the Manner of his being Taken, Examination, and Commitment To the TOWER; On the 12th. of ~~purpoe, to Arret and Stay the aid Veel, till a further Account could be given. August~~ ^{December. 1688.} though it was not peedily done, nor without further Application, yet upon Search it was plainly perceived, that no ordinary Peron was concerned therein. However he had Notice, as it is conjectured, or at least expected a Search, and Retired, in Diguie, to a Houe in Hope and Anchor Alley in Wapping, where, by the Vigilance of the Neighbours, he was this Day dicovered through his Diguie; and some Contables being called and consulted, it was on all hands concluded, (since they had heard he was one of the principal Perons procrib'd by the Prince of ORANGE, and Confederate Lords, as an Evil Counellor, a Perverter of the Laws, and Betrayer of the Liberties of the People) it was convenient to eize him, which they did without any Reitance, between One and Two of the Clock, being then in a Furr Cap, a Seaman's Neckeloth, and a Ruty Coat. So proceeding to carry him before the Lord Mayor, they brought him into the City in a Coach guarded with Blunderbues, &c. preceded by one Coach and followed by another; as also by a great Number of the Rabble, with shouts and Acctions. When coming to the Entrance of Grocer's Hall, having then on an old Hat, instead of a Cap, he alighted, and was conducted thither, hanging down his Head, and hedding some Tears. And coming before the Lord Mayor, after a hort Examination, &c. and a Repat for Refrehment, he was committed to the Tower in the charge of a strong Guard, where he remains to expect the Iue.

FINIS.